MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY

HURLEY
CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL

PEDIATRIC PUBLIC HEALTH INITIATIVE

Alice Hamilton Scholars complete public health training, mentored research, and clinical care with the Michigan State University - Hurley Children's Hospital Pediatric Public Health Initiative (PPHI).

The two-year scholar program is named in honor of Alice Hamilton (1869–1970), an American physician, research scientist, author, humanitarian, and social justice pioneer. Dr. Hamilton is considered the mother of the field of occupational health and spent her life protecting vulnerable populations from toxic exposures.

EDUCATION

Scholars earn a FREE Master of Public Health degree. Make a difference in people's lives, stand up for health equity, and be a part of the solution to better health outcomes. MSU's online program is a generalist MPH degree that can be customized to your pediatric public health interests.

LEADERSHIP

Scholars work directly with Mona Hanna-Attisha, MD, MPH, founder and director of PPHI, an innovative and model public health program committed to the mission of improving child outcomes.
